252 in stone and clay. Only a small part of cookery in [354] Tepoztlán is done on the brazier.

Most of the other articles which contribute to culinary technique are Indian, not European. The [412] small andesite mortar (S. molcajete; N. molcaxitl) and the pestle (S. tejolote; N. texolotl) are used chiefly for grinding chile. Two of the three common forms of 285 basket are likewise pre-Columbian in general char- 415 acter. These are the forms without handles: the chiquihuite (N. xiquihuitl), which is stiff, as wide as it is deep, and coiled on splints; and the tompiate (N. tompiatl), which is flexible, twice as deep as it is wide, and woven of soft reed. The other basket, which is of the shape of an ordinary European market basket, with a handle, has no Nahuatl name (it is always called canasta), and is apparently a form introduced [171] by the Spaniards. Its principal use is in marketing; [482] therefore it is carried only by women, and on the left [562] arm under the rebozo. The whole forms a canasta-rebozo minor complex of post-Columbian development.

The other two baskets are used for the storage and [251] transport of food (the chiquihuite is also used to strain [252] honey), and may be carried by either man or woman.

177 Mexican pottery has been much modified since the Conquest. Many forms are European, and the ware is 323 in general inferior. Shell-decorated Cuernavaca pottery is common in Tepoztlán, and there are occasional pieces of glazed and painted Oaxaca ware. The ware in general use in cookery is the plain ware of Toluca. [415] The pot (S. olla; N. xoctli) preserves the ancient form;

After the first week has passed all the women and girls of the house bathe together in the temazcal. First they eat clemole, of which there is a large olla. They make little baskets of maguey fiber [S. estrepaco; N. ixtli] containing pieces of soap for all those who are to bathe in the temazcal. If it is the first child, the godmother, who is always present, makes a cacomixtle of estrepaco with a cake of soap worth ten centavos inside it. The new mother is carried to the temazcal by a man. The others, including the midwife, bring with them into the temazcal a quarter of a liter of alcohol and an egg mixed together in a basin. The body and hair of the new mother are washed by the midwife, and the alcohol and egg mixture is thrown over her. All cover themselves with leaves, and as the fire heats, lie down on a petate until the perspiration comes. Then all wash again with warm water, soap, and estrepaco. The midwife does everything for the mother, finishing by binding her up with the ceñidor.

Every week, as long as she stays in bed, the new mother and all those who are looking after her must bathe in the temazcal. Since this period usually lasts a month, this makes four baths. Some, however, reduce it to two weeks—"two temazcals."

As soon after the birth as possible [it may even be the same day], the child is taken to the church for baptism.[1] The child is taken by the godfather and godmother. After the baptism chocolate is drunk and mamon[2] is eaten.

When the mother first goes out of doors after birth, thirty or forty days thereafter,[3] the child is dressed in new clothes, and the mother, in company with the godparents, takes it to hear

[1] The absence of the priest is most felt in the omission of baptism. "Now our children are like animals."

[2] A cake of egg and cornstarch.

[3] There is an inconsistency in the accounts as to the time. It should probably be forty days, because Christ was presented in the Temple forty days after birth (Candlemas). Gamio, describing the tacamiza (not so named there) for Teotihuacan, says that the purpose of the ritual is to solemnize the choice of godparents. Nothing in the Tepoztlán materials would confirm or deny this meaning. But it apparently has, in Tepoztlán, the meaning of a rite of passage; it introduces the child and reintroduces the mother into the community. On that day the rag doll (symbolizing the child in the womb) is taken from its place on the mother's abdomen.
